This means you should put yourself in the place of your customers. When you take the position of the customer and test the experience of using your own eCommerce website and app, you will see what works for the customer and what doesn't. This will help you come up with user-centered solutions that will in turn guarantee a smooth shopping experience, high conversions, and high customer retention. So when building your eCommerce web store and eCommerce app, these best practices should be your guiding points: Understand the end user. The store design should be beautiful. Products should be displayed in a clean and uncluttered manner. Clear and straightforward menus make for painless navigation. Use call to action (CTA) buttons like Buy Now. Provide convenient payment and shipment methods. Use clear but creative descriptions of products. Use clear language with regards to the shipping, returns, and refund policy. Make it easy for users to reach you with any questions and concerns. Have a Frequently Asked Questions section. Clear Communication All the Way A great user experience continues after users have bought and paid for their product. Customers will expect to be informed: when you receive their order and their payment when the product will ship and when they will receive it when the product has shipped Set up an email communication system that does not leave the user in the dark during any stage of the process. In addition, make it easy for users to reach you through a robust contact form and online chat system. In a very competitive eCommerce market, another facet of communication that should not be overlooked is creating great content for your eCommerce blog and newsletter. Tips for Creating Great Content for Your Online Store Be creative with your product photos so they stand out. Stock photos don't set you apart. Don't forget video, audio, icons, and other media. Create stories around your products, and don't reproduce manufacturers' descriptions. Use short paragraphs and bullet points—embrace white space. Divide content into sections with descriptive sub-headers. Hyperlink certain words to lead visitors to more content or products. Don't forget to guide visitors to the next step using call-to-action phrases. What Every eCommerce App Should Offer Every eCommerce app should have basic functionalities that allow customers to: sign up, register, log in, verify and manage their accounts log in through their social media accounts search by categories and shop product list add items to a shopping cart edit their shopping cart list pay using methods like PayPal, Stripe, and more view their order status and order history receive automated email responses contact the seller through email leave comments and feedback, and give reviews and ratings Take Advantage of the eCommerce Android App Templates Available on CodeCanyon Now!
